sharing design's role in shaping our future

2022 Honored Citizen
Lillian Pitt

Lillian Pitt has shaped Oregon through her work as a multimedia artist, mentor, and advocate. She was born on the Warm Springs Reservation and is of Warm Springs, Wasco, and Yakima descent. Telling the story of her ancestors through her art, Lillian's work is all around us.

Lillian's art has been at the heart of numerous building projects across the Pacific Northwest and the world. With the Confluence project, she designed the Welcome Gate for the Vancouver Land Bridge. Her art illuminates Portland Tri-Met stations, the Native American Student Center at PSU, as well as sites in Sapporo, Japan.

Art is an essential part of our built environment. Lillian's work tells stories that connect people to the built environment and fosters inclusivity and curiosity about things we may take for granted.

Lillian's impact is not limited to her art. She is a collaborator and committed mentor to numerous Native American artists from across the Pacific Northwest. By supporting Native American artists, Lillian ensures that the Native American story of Oregon continues to be shared and evolve with each new generation.

Whether it is through her art, personal connections, or acts of generosity, Lillian works at every level of scale to achieve a more balanced and just world. Her story inspires us to consider how we might make an impact at every scale and medium in which we work.
